THE BALLOON, AN AUXILIARY OF WAR .- One of the most remarkable feats ever recorded in modern warfare, showing the ingenuity of man in bringing science to his aid, is the introduction of the Balloon, as an assistant in carrying on war. This was for the first time successfully introduced in a recent battle before Richmond, and is thus graphically described in a letter to a New York paper, from the telegraph operator, who conducted the feat :

" For some time past I have been ordered by Col. Eckert (our superintendent of military telegraphs) to try a telegraphic experiment from a balloon. Saturday morning, when we heard that a great battle must be fought, Professor Lowe notified me that I should extend the wire to his balloon, and would try it. In one hour we had brought the wire a mile and a half, and I was ready to ascend with the Professor. The battle had commenced. When it had reached its zenith, Professor Lowe and myself, with the telegraph, had reached an altitude of two thousand feet. With the aid of good glasses we were enabled to view the whole affair between these powerful contending armies.

" As the fight progressed, hasty observations were made by the Professor and given to me verbally, all of which I instantly forwarded to Gen. McCleiian and division commanders through the agency of the obedient field instrument which stood by our side in the bottom of the car. Occasionally a masked rebel battery would open upon our brave fellows. In such cases the occupants of the balloon would inform our artillerists of its position, and the next shot or two would, in every case, silence the masked and annoying

" For hours, and until quite dark, we remained in the air, the telegraph keeping up constant communication with some point. From the bal-loon to Fortress Monroe, a distance of over one hundred miles, this wire worked beautifully. A number of messages were sent and received between these two points, and had it not been for the tremendous rush of business on the wire I should have telegraphed you directly from the balloon, while the battle was raging.

" Sunday morning at daybreak we again ascended. Early in the morning the battle was renewed, and with more fierceness than the day before. Incessant firing of musketry and artillery was kept up until noon, when I had the extreme pleasure to announce by telegraph from the balloon that we could see the enemy retreating rapidly towards Richmond. At this time we could see firing on James river to the left of Richmond, distance from the balloon (some said) fifteen miles. The fire was of short duration."

HOW RICHMOND LOOKED FROM THE BALLOON. "The streets of Richmond in the morning presented a deserted appearance, there being but very few people to be seen in the streets. During the afternoon of Sunday nothing of interest transpired beyond the removal of the rebel dead and wounded, all of which we could distinctly see from the balloon. Every available machine that had wheels was brought into requisition for this purpose. From the scene of battle into the city of Richmond the road was literally lined with ambulances, wagons and carts, conveying the dead and wounded.

" About twilight we saw camp-fires innumerable around the city; smoke issued from all their hospitals and barracks, which showed us to a certainty that the main body of their army had fallen back to Richmond. Monday morning we made several ascensions, and found a small force near the last scene of action, and thousands of troops marching out from the city, so you may look momentarily for a report of another severe

This is beyond question, one of the most remarkable feats the ingenuity of man has ever yet compassed.
